

Did You Know...

... that Martin Mall caught a playing card with his mouth under open parachute?

Sponsors of the show: Helmut Cloth and Eva Brandecker

The NSL News used the time in the morning to get the video clip of the "Magic Skydive Show Night" ready for uploading. Skydiver, artist, acrobat and magician Martin Mall put together the show that included several other professional artists. Airtec, maker of the CYPRES, and Paratec sponsored the show. Helmut Cloth, inventor of the electronic opening device, visited yesterday with several CYPRES staff people and met with Eva Brandecker who owns the Paratec facilities next door.

Martin Mall introduced a new trick that had never been shown before. He left the stage for a low altitude jump, while his anchor of the show, Paul Nathan, had three volunteers on the stage who had to draw a playing card. Gill Winter, French IPC Delegate, signed the card. Paul Nathan then shot the card up to Martin Mall under his open parachute with a big gun. Martin Mall was supposed to catch it in the air and bring it back to the stage.

He did so successfully. In fact, he had caught the card with his mouth and presented it live on stage. Gill Winter confirmed that it was her signature and the original card. Well done, Martin. Then he continued with the acrobatics and magic on stage. It was a great show, thanks to the sponsors.

Magic Skydive Show Night at the World Cup 2011